H!

GO
AHEAD.
KILL ME.

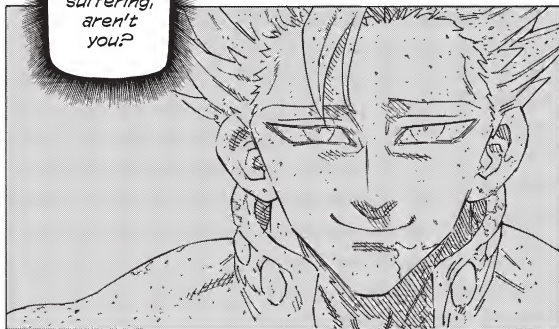

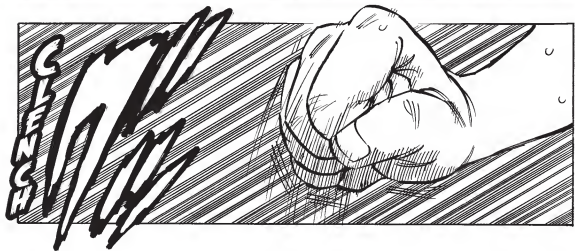

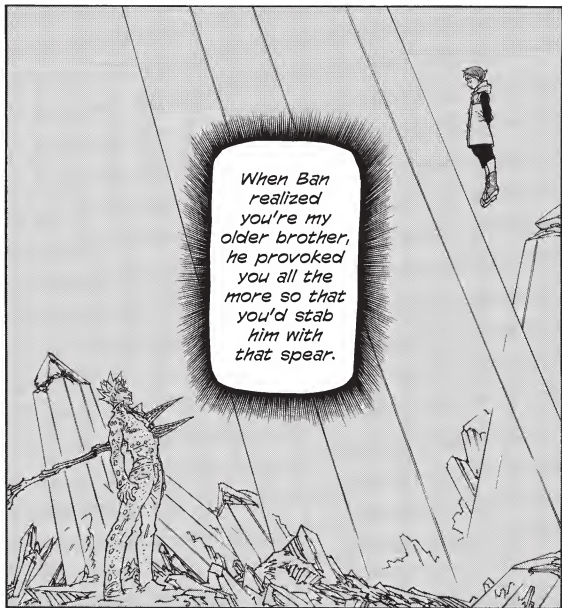

...What's
so
funny

Why's
he smiling

Don't put
on a front.
You're
actually
suffering,
aren't
you?

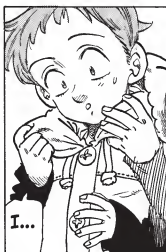

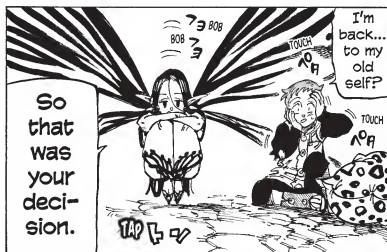

It's
just
as you
saw.

I
couldn't control
myself
and killed
Lowe.

Gloxinia-
sama...
What was
that just
now?!

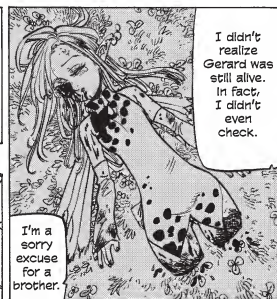

Before I
knew it,
I was fighting
as one of
The Ten
Commandments.

But killing him
didn't cure
my anger and
bitterness.
So I turned on
all humanity and
"Stigma" for
not being able to protect
my sister.

It's not a competition.

No!
I'm the
sorriest
excuse for
a brother there is!

I didn't realize Gerard
was still
alive.
In fact,
I didn't
even check.

So...
why didn't
you kill Lowe?

I'm a
sorry
excuse
for a brother.

The same was true of you too.

Even the man that I consider worthless trash means the world to my sister.

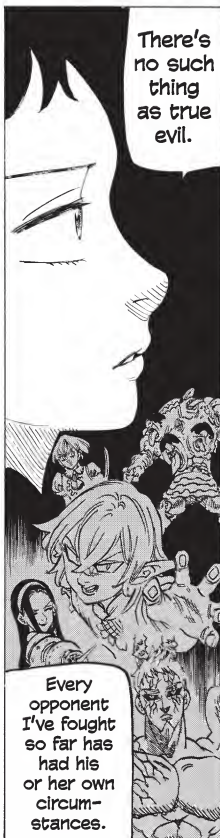

So when I considered that... I couldn't kill him.

And I think Lowe meant a lot to Gerard...

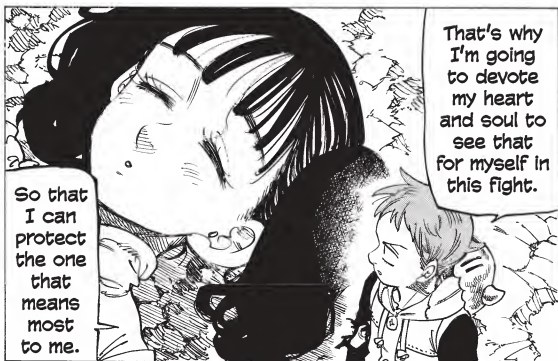

True evil does exist.

Such naivety makes me worry about the fight that lies ahead.

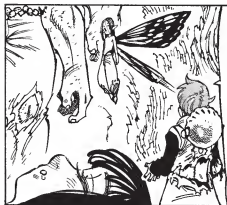

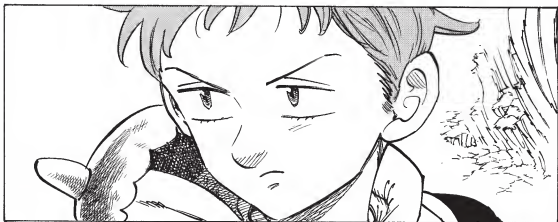

There's no such thing as true evil.

Every opponent I've fought so far has had his or her own circumstances.

So that I can protect
the one that means
most
to me.

That's why
I'm going
to devote
my heart
and soul to see that
for myself in
this fight.

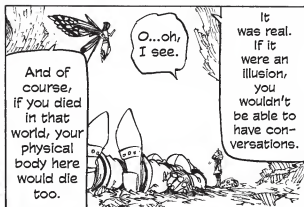

By the way,
was the Holy
War that I
experienced
the real thing?
Or was it...
all...an
illusion?

Then
you
pass.

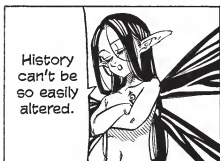

It was possible you could have died before even reaching the test.

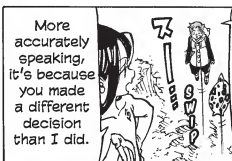

And of course, if you died in that world, your physical body here would die too.

O...oh, I see.

It was real. If it were an illusion, you wouldn't be able to have conversations.

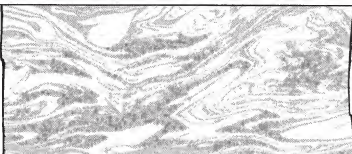

History can't be so easily altered.

More accurately speaking, it's because you made a different decision than I did.

Then... the fact that I made it back means...I made the right choice in the test?

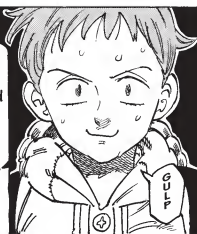

...it's structured so that history is revised to force the world back to its original state.

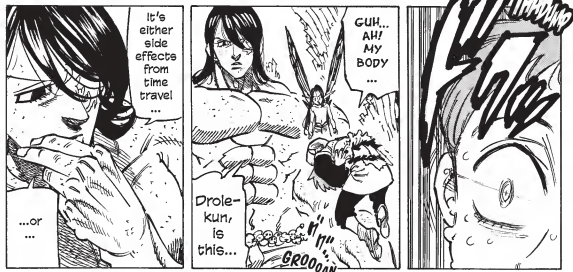

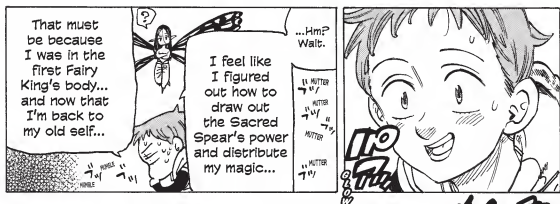

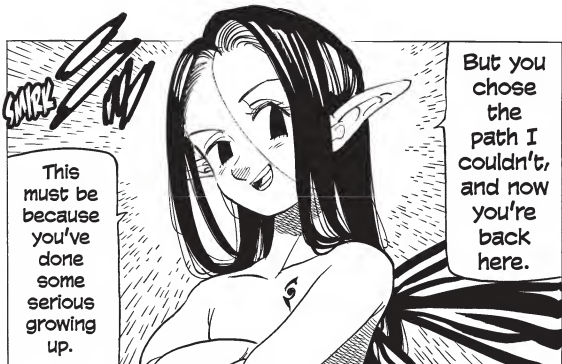

Apart from tiny changes, if you try to change fate drastically ...

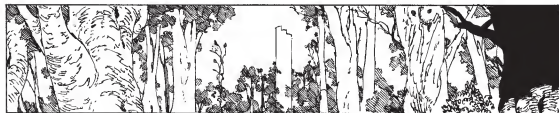

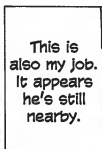

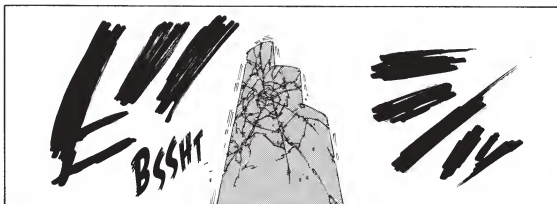

...it's possible you'd have been swallowed up in a whirlpool of anger and gone down the exact same path as me to never return.

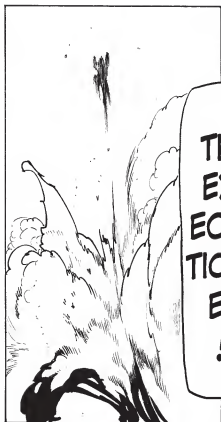

So if you'd made the same choice I did...
